Doctor Keeps Body of Wife In Glass Case

LONDON. — Dr. Martin Van Butchell, a distinguished London doctor, was a man of wide learning and skill, but he could not bear to be parted from his wife. When she died, he was stricken with grief—but he thought out a scheme by which he might continue his day-to-day life with her.

Mrs. Van Butchell alone had seen the soundness of the reasons underlying her husband's eccentricities. Other people were inclined to laugh when the doctor rode a pony painted with brilliant green and blue spots. But Mrs. Van Butchell agreed that since her husband had first learned to ride on a rocking horse, it was wise for him to keep as close to the original as possible.

Dr. Van Butchell detested buttons and designed a garment of white elastic wool, stretching from ankles to neck, which served the purpose of coat, trousers and waistcoat all in one. His wife appreciated its convenience in saving a busy doctor's time.

Poured Drugs in Lake

Even when the doctor visited the Serpentine and by pouring drugs into it turned it into a lake of medicine, Mrs. Van Butchell could never see anything but common sense in the affair.

The doctor made very good medicine, and so prodigious a dose as an entire lake of it enabled everyone to try its qualities, if they felt so disposed.

The doctor realized how well it pays to advertise. When he went riding, he carried a jawbone slung about his waist as a sign of his profession. Once every week he sat on his doorstep with a little tray of cakes, tarts, sweets, apples and nuts, and gleefully dispensed hospitality to the children of the district, making good friends with them, knowing that the children of today can be the doctor's patients of tomorrow.

Now, with all these means of adding to the gaiety of life lingering only in his memory, he looked at his wife's body and considered his scheme for enjoying her company for years to come.

Appearance of Health

He consulted his old friend, Dr. William Hunter, one of the foremost anatomists of the day. Hunter was familiar enough with his friend's queer ways, but he listened in astonishment.

Dr. Van Butchell wanted to embalm his wife, restoring the appearance as nearly as possible to one of health. He dispatched her body to Dr. Hunter's dissecting room, and there a remarkable change took place in Mrs. Van Butchell's appearance.

A mixture of oil of turpentine and camphorated spirit of wine injected into the vascular system gave her an appearance of ruddy health, particularly when her cheeks were suitably padded and stuffed with powdered niter and camphor. In a glass fronted case, Mrs. Van Butchell was laid and held in place by a bath of plaster of Paris.

Farm Kids Rated as Having Better Chance Than Others

CHICAGO.—Farm kids have all the luck. They're healthier, their responsibilities build stronger character, and often by the time they're 20, they're capitalists.

That's the summation of a 4-H club official, G. L. Noble, director of the national committee on boys' and girls' club work.

"If cities had a youth program similar to 4-H clubs," he said, "juvenile delinquency would be greatly decreased."

Noble contends that city youngsters don't have the responsibilities of their rural cousins.

"We spend thousands of dollars on supervised recreation for kids in the cities," he said. "The kids are told what to do. They don't learn how to take responsibility—and if you don't learn that, oftentimes you turn out to be a wastling."

Noble says that it is different with rural youngsters as members of 4-H clubs.

"Each club is a little democracy. The kids map out their own program. They take responsibilities."

He said that the nation's cities need a 4-H club type of program even more than the rural areas.

"Farm kids would be kept busy with chores even if there weren't a 4-H club," Noble said. "But city kids don't have an opportunity to work with their hands and with different gadgets."

Noble says that the 4-H club program gives rural youngsters a chance to gain recognition—an important ingredient in a well rounded personality.

Mrs. Virginia S. Marks, Supt., Appomattox County Board of Public Welfare.

Dear Mrs. Marks:

It is with deep regret to this Board that you have seen fit to sever your relationship as Supt. of Public Welfare in Appomattox County. We realize the County has suffered a great loss, and this Board a very personal loss in losing your wise and sympathetic council in the administration of the Welfare Program.

And furthermore assure you we will always rember our very pleasant association with you in this work. Our interest in you and our loyalty and devotion for you will always follow you in your future work.

Errant-Husband Seeker Has Outstanding Record

NEW YORK.—George H. Lamb is one of the few favored men in the nation who are able to combine business with pleasure to an extent each year which insures them of a nice vacation.

Lamb is chief of the abandonment bureau of the Queen's district attorney's office. Every year, at about the time the season in New York indicates how desirable a warmer clime may be, Lamb hies himself to Florida or California or some other equally attractive setting.

Instead of a rod and reel, however, he takes along a few bench warrants charging abandonment and a lot of addresses and telephone numbers supplied by deserted wives with families to support.

He usually returns with a large bag of errant husbands. His last haul was 24 delinquent husbands and fathers out of a possible 37. Of these, 21 signed papers agreeing to help support their children. The other three refused to sign. With the aid of local police, Lamb had them arrested and returned to New York.

In his day Lamb has brought back some 3,000 errant fathers. He likes to think of the children who have benefited by his work.

Mrs. Darkus J. Mayberry

Mrs. Darkus Jane Mayberry died March 18 at her home near Spout Spring, after an illness of nine days.

She was born in Appomattox County August 2, 1865. She was the widow of Rouse Mayberry.

Mrs. Mayberry is survived by six children: William Mayberry, Lynchburg; Peter Mayberry and Jim Mayberry, of Spout Spring; Miss Janie Mayberry, Mrs. Emma Mann and Mrs. Annie Maan, of Appomattox.

Funeral services were held at the grave in Concord Cemetery, Monday at 2 P. M. Rev. G. E. Hughes conducted the services.

Mr. Calvin H. Robinson,
Editor, Times-Virginian,
Appomattox, Va.
Dear Sir:

I read with a great deal of interest Mr. L. Crawley's letter published in your paper March 2nd. Its plan to have a general school committee meet with the patrons of each school to determine the needs of the school is a wise suggestion.

I sincerely hope the school board and committee will see fit to carry out Mr. Crawley's plan.

This is a cooperative undertaking. Let us all work together for better school facilities.

Thomas E. Childress

Funeral services for Thomas Ennals Childress, 56, who died suddenly at his home at Evergreen Wednesday, were held at 2 P. M. Friday. Services were conducted by the Rev. J. M. Walker. Burial was in Liberty Cemetery.

Letters To The Editor:

March 21, 1950

Editor, Times-Virginian,

When the Episcopal Church, St. Anne's, was rebuilt at Appomattox, it brought memories of Miss Edmonia V. Hardey, a dear friend and teacher of so many of our Appomattox citizens. In some families two generations. She came to Appomattox as a young woman and taught all the grammar grades in one large room, and the other large room took care of all high school pupils. I was in her first class in the two-room building which was on the lot on which Mr. T. W. Moses built his residence.

She was an Episcopalian and used to return to her home church as often as she could, but she was a regular attendant at Liberty Baptist Church, which was the only church in the village of Appomattox. She was active in church work and after several years she was convinced that it was her duty to join Liberty. She was retired many years ago and made her home with her sister, Mrs. Charles Abbitt in Amherst County, Va. She visited Appomattox frequently and she was welcomed by people of all ages and her memory is dear to many.

I felt it would be very fitting to place a memorial to her in St. Anne's Church and upon inquiry I was informed that a cross and 2 brass vases are needed for the altar, so this is an invitation to those who knew and loved "Miss Eddie" to make a contribution to this fund, and please do so promptly as we are anxious to have them in place before the dedication of the restored church on April 28, 1950. You may leave your contribution at either bank and at the county treasurer's office.

If more than enough is contributed it will be given to the treasurer of St. Anne's for the building fund.

Mrs. Vara Burke Abbitt.

Mr. Childress was born August 27, 1893 and was employed by a local lumber company for 19 years. He was a member of Liberty Baptist Church. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ethel Christine Childress, and the following children: Eugene Edward, Melvin Douglas, Patricia Erlene and Nancy Bell, of Evergreen; also two children by a former marriage, Mrs. Louise G. Goin, of Evergreen and Ennis G. Childress, of Washington.

Richmond Colts of the Piedmont League in Florida for annual spring training.

Birth rate in 1949 in the United States was the second highest in history.
